BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: Maya Rivière Ward was an important mid-20th century American expert in the rehabilitation of the disabled. As Director of Rehab Codes, Inc., Rivière coordinated the groups that produced the Rehabilitation Codes, conducted extensive research that shaped the final text of the code itself, and also served as the administrator of Rehab Codes, Inc.

Mary Richey (Maya) Rivière was born in Georgia on September 16, 1908. She received her BA from Agnes Scott College in 1928 and later studied voice at the Juilliard School. She worked at a variety of jobs, including church organist and Hollywood script reader, before becoming a caseworker for the Musicians Emergency Fund in 1932. In the late 1930s she also worked as a director in the WPA Federal Theater Project.

After recovering from several years of incapacitation due to tuberculosis, she joined the National Tuberculosis Association Rehabilitation Service as a field consultant in 1945. In 1948-49 she served as Executive Director of the National Council on Rehabilitation. Awarded one of the first Fulbright Scholarships, she studied at Oxford University under G.D.H. Cole, 1949-1954.

She received the D.Phil. in 1954 for her dissertation "Rehabilitation of the Disabled, with Special Reference to the Administration of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act." Upon her return to the U.S., she worked briefly for the Kessler Institute of Rehabilitation in New Jersey before being hired by the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children in New York City to work on the project that evolved into Rehabilitation Codes, Inc. After Rehabilitation Codes closed in 1968, Rivière served as a consultant for a variety of organizations before retiring due to ill health in 1970. She died in New York City on November 7, 1989.

Rivière was married twice: first in 1937 to Girvan George Higginson whom she divorced in 1942; and second in 1954 to John Owen Ward, a British musicologist and music editor eleven years her junior, who survived her. She kept her maiden name professionally.

HISTORICAL NOTE: The purpose of the Rehabilitation Codes as an information management tool was threefold: to create a consistent record-keeping structure that could be navigated by rehabilitation professionals from multiple disciplines; to connect often voluminous medical data with therapeutic reports within one patient file in order to highlight individual rehabilitation goals and purposes; and to shift the public perception and professional focus of rehabilitation from managing individual handicaps to maximizing individual assets and capabilities in order to improve the social status of rehabilitated persons.

The groundwork for the project that became Rehabilitation Codes was laid in 1950, when the World Health Organization (WHO) requested the creation of a U.S. Surgeon General's Subcommittee on Physical Impairment whose primary task would be revising the International Statistics Classification of Disease. Their request was granted, and the resulting subcommittee worked for several years on a three part code: one part for Impairment, one part for Cause, another part for Etiology.

Meanwhile, in 1954 the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children's (AACC) Queens Rehabilitation Program conducted a demonstration project for community organizations serving children with cerebral palsy, which included a diagnostic rehabilitation clinic. The project revealed many inconsistencies in the nomenclature used to describe children with cerebral palsy. An advisory committee was formed within AACC to explore the issue, and further studies showed that inconsistent descriptive nomenclature was a widespread problem in the general pediatric rehabilitation community.

In 1956, AACC Executive Director Leonard Mayo and other members of the AACC Advisory Committee met with Mary Switzer, Director of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (OVR) at the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to discuss the nomenclature issue. Following that meeting, Switzer allowed OVR Special Project funds to be used to examine the possibility of developing a code to describe musculoskeletal and neuromuscular disabilities and the AACC Advisory Committee became the Advisory Committee on Classification of Nomenclature and Criteria Related to Disability and Rehabilitation (known as the Advisory Committee).

In 1959, members of the Advisory Committee met with members of the U.S. Surgeon General's Subcommittee on Physical Impairment (the Subcommittee). Examining the work of the Subcommittee, participants determined that the Subcommittee code focused more on the pathology of disability than its treatment. They also decided that because of the overlap in the membership of the Subcommittee and the Advisory Committee, it was appropriate for the Subcommittee to suspend their activities and transfer the responsibility for completing the code to the Advisory Committee.

At this same time the scope of the codes expanded, and five new subcommittees were created to study different areas of rehabilitation: Psychosocial, headed by Donald M. Carmichael of the Aftercare Clinic, New York State Department of Mental Hygiene; Vocational Rehabilitation, headed by Janet Pinner, Director of Selective Placements, New York State Employment Office; Human Communication (later Communication Disorders); Speech; and Visual Function.

Also starting in 1959, the codes were tested at eight different institutions: Thayer Hospital, Waterville, Maine; Meeting Street School, Providence, RI; Chronic Disease Section, Michigan State Dept. of Health, Lansing, MI; Home for Crippled Children, Pittsburgh, PA; Kansas City Goodwill, Kansas City, MO; Craig Rehabilitation Center, Denver, CO; Mary T. Morrison Rehabilitation Center, San Francisco, CA; and Community Rehabilitation Industries, Los Angeles, CA.

The results of the test were applied to the ongoing development of the codes, and between 1962 and 1964, the revised codes were extensively field tested by rehabilitation organizations across the U.S., most notably by the Home for Crippled Children in Pittsburgh, PA where the codes had been in continuous use since 1959.

Individual parts of the code were also field tested. The Visual Function code was tested by organizations including the Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown, MA and the American Center for Research in Blindness and Rehabilitation in Newton, MA. The Communications Disorder code was evaluated by the New York Medical College in Valhalla, NY and New York City Department of Welfare's Children's Center. In 1964, the Third Party Payers Subcommittee was created, for organizations that used or implemented the codes as a baseline guide for evaluating patients for admittance to rehabilitation programs and to benchmark patient progress in the programs.

In 1965, Rehab Codes secured a grant from the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness (NINDB) and used the funds to extend the work of the Communications Disorders subcommittee for three additional years. A parallel grant was secured for the Visual Function subcommittee, and the Visual Code was split into "measurements" and "impairment."

Between 1965 and 1968, the codes continued to be revised based on data gleaned from ongoing testing and information gathered from a series of Rehab Codes-sponsored regional workshops in Nantucket, MA; Berea, KY; Lake Ozark, MO and Carmel Valley, CA. Furthermore, Rehab Codes collaborated with the California Department of Public Health to produce a series of six workshops that further tested the codes. The final iteration of the code was published in 1968, following the closing of Rehab Codes, Inc.

The growth of Rehab Codes, Inc. paralleled the development of the codes. For the first three years of its existence the Rehab Codes project was a special project of the AACC and was funded by grants from the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (OVR). When the OVR ceased funding the project in 1960, the AACC took over on an emergency basis for the fourth year. A Steering Committee replaced the Advisory Committee, and a Subcommittee on Future Planning was created to investigate future sponsorship and funding.

Rehab Codes took the first steps towards becoming an independent entity around 1961, when the Rehabilitation Codes project moved out of the offices of the AACC. The project remained connected to AACC administratively, but the bulk of funding for the project was provided by grants from the Vocational Rehabilitation Association (VRA), Easter Seals, and the NINDB.

In 1963 it was proposed that the project should be formally incorporated and become an independent entity. The Committee on Rehab Codes was formed. Switzer and Mayo conducted a site visit on behalf of the VRA, and made extensive administrative and programmatic recommendations. On April 1, 1964, Rehab Codes, Inc. was incorporated in the state of New York. The following years were marked by great difficulties in funding the project, as well as in recruiting and retaining qualified staff. In 1968, unable to secure additional funding after NINDB funds were exhausted, Rehab Codes, Inc. formally dissolved, closed its New York City offices, and transferred all of the corporate records to Rivière's home.

SCOPE AND CONTENT: The papers span the entirety of Rivière's life, and the life of Rehabilitation Codes as an organization. The bulk of the papers is material documenting Rivière's work with AACC (1954-1960) and her files as Director of Rehabilitation Codes (1958-1968), including general business correspondence, committee minutes, annual and project reports, financial records, and correspondence and reports related to the testing of the codes at various rehabilitation centers around the country.

A special feature of the collection are the hundreds of ephemeral publications relating to the rehabilitation of the disabled collected by Rivière in Great Britain in the late 1940s and early 1950s and in the U.S. in the period 1957-1968. Also included are newspaper and magazine clippings from Britain and U.S. from 1970-71.

The papers also include materials that document the extensive research Rivière conducted on British government-subsidized and/or sponsored organizations dedicated to rehabilitation in the course of writing her Oxford University thesis. Most notably she had significant contact with Reemploy, Inc., the Tottenham Disability Registry Office (DRO) and the Birmingham Accident Hospital (BAH).

The work with the Tottenham DRO and the BAH was initially done as research for Rivière's thesis. Following her retirement from Rehabilitation Codes, Rivière returned to the data from both institutions and pursued additional follow-up research to create crude longitudinal studies. The Tottenham project is the more complete of the two.

Finally, in addition to professional records, there is also considerable personal material including family correspondence, genealogical records, diaries, notebooks, newspaper clippings, educational records and photographs.
